To overcome the contamination caused by the strata of coal, it was necessary to sink a casing 8 ins. in diameter around the outside of the well for a distance of 450 ft., the casing then being filled with a thin cement composed of equal parts of clear Portland and sand. The air-lift pipes were then submerged 500 ft., making a lift to the surface of 190 ft., and from this point pipes were led 104 ft. to a tank placed on the roof of the building. The power end of the system consists of one 12 x 11 x 16 straight line Rand compressor. The compressor was started at 75 revolutions per minute and at a pressure of 105 pounds lifted the water 294 ft. at the rate of 8,000 gallons in 90 minutes, or 104,000 gallons every 24 hours.
